have to leave Richmond in the fall of 1864; nothing, and who still prate I of the "last man and the last dollar"-taking all the time throughout the war, to keep out of the army themselves, and confine themselves to exhortakees that we were their masters"-this at a moment when every well-informed man of sense knew that the thing was hopeless, and regarded and forgotten. Mr. Stephens in despair (refusing to appear proportion as it had been delayed-that these people were utterly stunned, and have said very little since, or only threatened to great many people in Baltimore and New York who are not satisfied—and regret that the war closed so soon. We are told by such persons that if the South had only held out. she would have triumphed—and an enthusiserved to be hung for surrendering. If we her: could only have gotten these people here during hostilities, as there are a great many of them, we should have done a great deal better-and might by this time have been a free and independent nation. But it was difficult to get through the lines, and very uncomfortable in the South, and the opportunity was lost. With a disposition to remedy the omission, they are very bitter now; they seek to transfer the quarrel between the North and the South from the tented field to the mass meeting and the Copperhead newspapers; and they insist as passionately on "Constitutional rights," and advise the South to "stand up," as warmly, as if they intended to do something for us-which they have never done yet. There is as much bitterness for the newspapers of this party against the North in behalf of the South as there used to be in the Charleston Mercury or the Richmond Enquirer. They have by no means done with the quarrel. Their idea is that the South can be set on its legs again and make another fight. If she could be wallowed and bitten still more terribly by the big dog of the North-New York and Baltimore Copperheads will only feel disappointed by as sporting gentlemen are disappointed when their terrier has been overmatched .-They will smoke their cigars and sip their wine-and try Fenianism. What becomes of the terrier? If they let him alone, perhans he will get well.

The South has been whipped in this fight fair and square—and after a splendid effort. Nobody laments the result more than we do. Nobody has been more mortified at the numiliation accompanying than we have een. But there is the rugged fact. What s to be done? We are in the Union-we re in the Union on compulsion-and we cannot get out of the Union. Fighting did not get us out-and talking will not do it tude, and spend her future railing at the North-and grinding her teeth? Is this The truth is bitter; do you think I have

If the antagonism is maintained between the North and the South, of course we will be crushed. Just in proportion as the South seeks to become a unit, just in the same proportion will the North become united against us. What the South requires for its safety—to say nothing of its prosper-ity—is a broad national sentiment commensurate with the whole country. And if we yield no more, we must yield at least enough for this. The South can take up a position which falls short of this, and might by political combinations carry sometimes an election, or a vote in the House of Representatives; but it would be only the position of Ireland in the British Empire, and the Irish members in the House of Commons. Therefore, we deeply regret the studied attempt at the North to regalvanize the Democratic party, with the hope of getting for it always the solid vote of the South. RALEIGH, N. C., TUESDAY, MARCH 20, 1866.

A NIGHT OF TERROR-TWO MEN IM-

PRISONED IN A MINERAL CAVE. Jonah has won a historic fame, and claimed the sympathies of ninety generations for being shut up in a whale's belly; and after being swallowed so suddenly, no wonder he should feel somewhat down in the mouth,-But Jonah has been outdone by Messrs. Jas. Peacock and John Kelley, who were im-prisoned in the bowels of the earth all Wednesday night, separated from humanity horizontally by three hundred feet of water, and perpendicularly by thirty feet of rock.

Wednesday morning Mr. Peacock and Mr. Ke ly went to work as usual at the recently discovered Peacock-Chapman-Radcliff-Bunting lead. They had to go down a shaft seventy feet deep; then along a drift horizontal 300 feet; there is then a rise of about eight feet into a new crevice, when another drift is reached about six hundred feet long, leading to a cave of considerable extent, where the had been excavating. Quitting time arrived, and the miners started to return home. They came to the descent between the second and the first, and sliding down this, one of the men found himself in the water. In an instant he comprehended the situation-the drift between them and the shaft by which they must return to daylight was filled with water, and the water constantly rising.

At a little distance east was a ravine, be side which was a shaft, which became fi'led with water, and from that made its way through the network of crevices into this There they were imprisoned, not knowing for how long; and there was but one possible way to make their situation known to those upon the surface. A shaft was being sunk into the cave in which they had been at work, and a small drill hole about two inches in diameter, had been bored down through thirty feet of solid rock. By using this as a speaking trampet, the men selow made those at work above, sinking the shaft, aware of their unpleasant and danger ons predicament.

Of course every out was at once made to rescue them. Barris were brought, sunk, filled with water and drawn up; but for a long time it seemed doubtful whether by this method the quantity of water in the shaft could be reduced faster than it was running At last it became evident that the water was lowering, and the men at the "pumps' (barre s) worked with renewed energy.-This continued all night, till daylight next been drawn off to such an extent that men in the cave concluded they could make their way out. They began to wade, the water being up to their necks; and, holding their candles aloft, began to wade along the drift. By and by they came to a place POLICIES OF INSURANCE where the cap rock, or roof of the tunnel in which they were, was so low that the candles could not be held above the water, and were extinguished; while in some places there was room enough between the water in the drift so that they could keep their noses where there was air; in some places the tunnel was completely filled with water for a short distance, compelling them to forego breathing for the time.

But at last the shaft was reached, and the cold, wet, hungry, bruised, weary devilsthat is the way the story was told to us, and they certainly did not look like men or angels -were dragged to daylight once more.-About twenty men were engaged all night in endeavoring to reduce the water in the shaft so that the men could escape, to all of whom the person rescued feel the deepest gratitude for their untiring exertions—Dubusus Times

If slighthollow in the back, so much the better, for t generally tends to ease in action, and to lessen motion in the saddle. A lady should never be heard upon the saddle-that is, there should be no bumping noise, not even in a trot. She should sit so closely, and when rising to the trot possess such elastic motion from the foot to the knee and the waist, that her return to the saddle should seem as light as a feather. She should sit "square to the front," and her horses ears-to speak as a soldier-ought to dress well with the buttons of the bosom of her habit. ---HOW DUTCH GAP GOT ITS NAME, Is told us by a Southern correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle:

"An Englishman and a Dutchman, so the story runs, undertook, for a wager, to row their respective skiffs from a place seven miles below the Gap to a point above it .-The man who first arrived at the place of destination was to be considered the champion, and to receive the stakes. Both started. The Englishman pulled out vigorously, while the Dutchman, with true Teutonic imperturbability, suffered his opponent to go ahead without an apparent effort to keep up with him. When the Englishman began to round the bluff, after passing the gap, the Dutchman was "hull down" and almost out of sight of his antagonist, who was counting on a "sure thing of it." When the Dutchman reached the gap, he run his skiff on shore, raised it on his shoulders and made his way with all possible dispatch across the few hundred feet of intervening space. When the Englishman arrived at the point at which the race was to terminate, what was his astonishment to find his opponent in his skiff, calmly awaiting his appearance, having relieved the weariness of his stay by smoking, with Dutch leisure, three or four pipes of tobacco. Whether the Dutchman succeeded by this trick in winning his wager is not known, but he gave a name to the gap, and was more successful as a navigator than the noted and "corked up" hero of New Orleans, the terror of women and children, at whose approach the very silver spoons tremble on the

A CARD! LL MEN OF EDUCATION and reflection A should ponder well upon the advantages of Life Insurance, and should promulgate their acquired knowledge throughout the whole circle of their acquaintance. They should remember that t recommends itself in many instances, not mere ly as a measure of expediency, but as a bounden duty, a duty easily discharged by the payment of a moderate sum. The question is: shall the married man trust the comfort of his family to a chance?—albeit a promising one; or is he n t rather bound to make sure of a provision, as far as be can, for his wife, his children, his helpless relations, for all those dependant upon him for support, and through the medium of Life Insurance, assure an adequate provision again t im-pending poverty and irretrievable distress? How many men have I heard say: "Yes, but I want to insure for a large sum when I do insure, and it is not convenient now." And so, because the man cannot gratify his vanity and pay the premium on $20,000, he dies, and leaves his wife and abild hou eless, sorrow-stricken and broken hearted, thrust on the cold kindness of quasi charitable relations, without a cent to bury him or provide food for themselves. And this because he, the loving and devoted husband, would not make even a temporary provision, consonant with his circumstances, for the wife who had been his nurse in sickness, his friend in distress, and whom he had sworn to cherish and protect, and by the payment of $75 or $100, secure many thousands. Strange that man, who owes to his wife the chief chain of his existence, the every day comfort of his life, should be able to look heartlessly to that period when their last parting shall take place,— when removed to that world, where to him, all is hope and consolation, he shall have wilfully left in darkness and desolation, steeped in poverty and wretchedness, to struggle with the hard jus-tice of a hard hearted world. Resorting to Life Insurance is risking nothing, but truly securing a certain profit upon that which is, at all times, an
